PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Visionary Growth, Procedural Adjustments

Rebecca D. Hancock

"Evolutionary, not revolutionary," is a phrase heard often by my colleagues and me as we have gathered during the opening days of Pulaski County, Virginia, public schools to discuss plans for facing the challenges of the 21st century. Frankly, it boggles my mind trying to reconcile the idealism of goals and visions while confronting day-to-day educational realities, but vision is important. The summer issue of this newsletter—with the statements by Loyal Jones and Richard Drake on the ASA's origins—testified to the vision of those who founded our association, and this Appalink, which contains our proposed by-law changes (next pages), is testimony to the growth of this vision and the need to bring our procedures up to date with our practices.

Last year as the Association's president, Roberta Herrin, chaired a by-laws committee made up of several past Association presidents. Its suggestions were incorporated into a draft which clarified wording, reorganized sections, eliminated repetitions and inconsistencies, and incorporated current practices. This draft was then reviewed at the August meeting of the Steering Committee. So what is being offered here for your review and consideration is not revolutionary, but simply the evolutionary results of a vision conceived and nurtured for the past fifteen—going on sixteen years. Thanks once again to our founders and particularly to Roberta for this, one of her many presidential accomplishments.

The Fifteenth Annual Appalachian Studies Conference was hosted by Western Carolina University at the Radisson Hotel in Asheville, N.C., March 20-22, 1992. The number of registrants was 354, only three fewer than the previous year’s Conference, despite the reduced travel budgets that stimulated so much commiseration among participants.

The 1992 theme, “Diversity in Appalachia: Images and Realities,” drew a number of proposals which focused on groups, individuals and topics that do not always attract full consideration. Eighty-nine presentations, including a significant number of media programs, were delivered in thirty-six sessions, with seven or eight running concurrently. In the last few years the Conference has attracted more and more outstanding proposals, and its growing success may be overloading attendees with too many difficult choices to make among presentations. David Whisnant, the banquet speaker, challenged the Association to reevaluate and renew its commitment to social change in Appalachia.

Papers from the Conference have been selected for publication in the 1993 ASA Journal, with East Tennessee State University’s Center for Appalachian Studies and Services provides the copy editing.

The 1992 Program Committee consisted of Pat Arnow, Tyler Blethen, Durward Dunn, Wilburn Hayden, Roberta Herrin, Sally Maggard, Norma Myers, Ches Sharp, Ernestine Upchurch, and Curtis Wood. Sue DeBord of Western Carolina’s Division of Continuing Education coordinated local arrangements and administration of the Conference.
